A MONSTER PARADE.

50,000 Catholic Marchers in Line Today Conclude a Week's Festivities in Gotham.

Special to The Courier.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Not in a long time has New York witnessed such another demonstration as the monster parade of Catholic organizations that was held this afternoon to mark the close of the week's celebration of the centennial of the New York diocese.

It is estimated that upwards of 50,000 marchers were in line, representing some 25 Catholic societies and institutions. The parade formed at the Washington Memorial Arch and then marched up Fifth avenue. Archbishop Farley and the visiting Cardinals and other prelates reviewed the procession in front of St. Patrick's Cathedral. Major General Thomas H. Barry, U. S. A., acted as Chief Marshal.

DUCKS ON THE RIVER.

Are Storm Swept and So Tired They Won't Get Out of One's Way.

Thousands upon thousands of wild ducks of every variety are swimming the Monongahela river above McKeesport and points further up, owing to the heavy storms which have been prevalent along the great lakes and which have driven the birds inland and southward. The flocks began to arrive on Wednesday and have been coming ever since.

Those which arrived yesterday are easily distinguished from the others which have been on the river longer. They evidently had traveled a great distance and were exceedingly tired. Passengers on upriver boats reported some of the flocks so sluggish in their movements from actual fatigue that they would allow a skiff or steamboat to approach within a few feet of them before they would fly.

To Go to Mt. Pleasant.
The local High School baseball team will go to Mt. Pleasant this afternoon and play the High School of that place. The boys are in good shape and confident of victory.

Sophy of Kravonia.

By ANTHONY HOPE.
Author of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Copyright, 1908, Anthony Hope Hawkins.

As we all know, perhaps no chance, certainly no power, to use a chance, was given to Lady Meg's friends, and we need not repeat that ignorance spurs us the trouble of dealing with their unfulfilled hopes and schemes. Still, the intrigues, the gossip and the royalist atmosphere were to Sophy in some sort an introduction to political interests and no doubt had an influence on her mind. So far as she ever acquired political principles—the existence of such in her mind is, it must be confessed, doubtful—they were the tenets which reigned in the Rue de Grenelle and in the houses of Lady Meg's royalist allies.

So on one side of Lady Meg are the nobles and their noble ladies, sulking and scheming, and on the other, a bizarre contrast, her witch and her wizard, Mme. Mantis and Pharo. Where the carcass is, there will the vultures be. Should the carcass get up and walk, presumably the vultures would wing an expectant way after it. Mme. Mantis, the woman of the prophecy about "something bright," had followed Lady Meg to Paris, scenting fresh prey. But a more ingenious and powerful undertaker came on the scene. In association with Mantis, probably very close and not creditable association, is Pharo, alias Jean Coulin. In after days, under the republic, this personage got himself into trouble and was tried at Lille for obtaining no less a sum than 150,000 francs from a rich old royalist lady who lived in the neighborhood of the town. The rogue got his money under cover of a valuation that MacMahon would restore the monarchy, a nearer approach to the real than he reached in his dealings with Lady Meg, but not probably on that account any the more favorably viewed by his judges.

The president's interrogation of the prisoner, ranging over his whole life, tells us the bulk of what we know of him, but the earliest sketch comes from Sophy herself in one of the rare letters of this period which have survived. "A dirty, scrubby fellow, with greasy hair and a squint in his eye," she tells Jolla Robbins. "He wears a black cloak down to his heels and a glimmering thing around his neck that he calls his 'pocket-charm.' I suppose he means, 'eye-begone work spells with it, and his precious partner, Mantis knows it (Mantis is Sophy's) whenever she meets him. Phew! I'd like to give them both a dusting! What do you think? Pharo, as he calls himself, tells Lady Meg, he can make the dead speak to her, and she says that isn't it possible that, since they've died themselves and know all about it, they may be able to tell her how not to. Seeing how this suits her book, it isn't Pharo's who's going to say 'No,' though he tells her to make a will in case anything happens before he's ready to establish communication—and perhaps they won't tell after all, but he thinks they will! Now I come into the game! He's being very sympathetic, they're to talk through me (Mantis again is Sophy's). Did you ever hear of such nonsense! I told Master Pharo that I didn't know whether his ghosts would talk through me, but I didn't need any of their help to pretty well see through him! But Lady Meg's hot on it. I suppose it's what I'm here for, and I must let him try—or pretend to. It's all one to me, and it pleases Lady Meg. Only I have nothing else to do with each other! I'll see to that. To tell you the truth, I don't like the look in his eyes sometimes, and I don't think Mrs. Mantis would either!"

As a medium Sophy was a failure. She was antipathetic, purposely antagonistic, said Jean Coulin, attempting to defend himself against the president's suggestion that he had received something like $5,000 from Lady Meg and given her not a jot of supernatural information in return. This failure of Sophy's was the first rift between Lady Meg and her. Pharo could have used it against her, and his power was great, but it was not at present his game to eject her from the household. He had other ends in view, and there was no question of the hundred-pound note yet.

It is pleasant to turn to another figure, one, again, standing out in the meager records of this time and bears its prominence well. Casimir, marquis de Sarre, is neither little nor sordid, neither schemer nor impostor. He was a brave and simple soldier and gentleman, holding his ancestral principles in his heart, but content to serve his country in "evil times" until good should come. He was courteous and attentive to Lady Meg, touching her folks with a light hand, and to Sophy he gave his love with an honest and impetuous sincerity, which he masked by a gay humor lest his lady should be grieved at the havoc she herself had made.

Last among the prominent members of the group in which Sophy lived in Paris is Mme. Zerkovitch. Her husband was of Russian extraction, his father having settled in Kravonia and become naturalized there. The son was now in Paris as correspondent to one of the principal papers of Slavonia. Mme. Zerkovitch was by birth a Pole, not a remarkable woman in herself, but important in this history as the effective link between these days and Sophy's life in Kravonia. She was small and thin, with auburn hair and very bright hazel eyes, with light colored lashes. An agreeable talker, an accomplished singer and a kind hearted woman, she was an acquaintance to be welcomed. Whatever strange notions she harbored about Sophy in after days she concluded from the beginning and never lost a strong affection for her, and their friendship ripened quickly from their first meeting at Lady Meg's, where Marie Zerkovitch was a frequent visitor and much interested in Pharo's hocus pocus.

Chapter Seven

SOPHY'S enemies were at work and Sophy was careless. Such is the history of the next twelve months. Mantis was installed medium now, and the revelations came. But they came slow, vague, fitful, tantalizing. Something was wrong. Pharo confessed ruefully, what could it be, for surely Lady Meg by her faith (and, it may be added, her liberality) deserved well of the unseen powers? He hinted at the evil eye, but without express accusation. Under "the influence" Mantis would speak of "the malign one," but Mantis when awake thought Mlle. de Gruche a charming young lady. It was odd and mysterious, Pharo could make nothing of it. He, too, thought Mlle. Sophie was advanced to that pleasant informality of description—quite lavishly and entirely devoted to Lady Meg, only unhappily so irresponsible to the unseen, a trifle unsympathetic it might be. But what would you? The young had no need to think of death or the dead. Was it to be expected, then, that Mlle. Sophie would be a good subject or take much interest in the work, great and wonderful though it might be?

The pale of rogues did their work well and quietly, so quietly that nothing of it would be known were it not that they quarreled later on over the spoils of this and other transactions, and Mme. Mantis in the witness box at Lille used her memory and her tongue freely. "The plan now was to get rid of the young lady," she said plainly. "Pharo feared her power over my lady, and that my lady might leave her all the money. Pharo hated the young lady because she would have nothing to say to him and told him plainly that she thought him a charlatan. She had courage, yes! But it also would have joined in with him—why, then, into the streets with me! I knew that well enough, and Pharo knew I knew it. So I hated her, too, fearing that some day she and he would make up their differences, and I—that for me! Yes, that was how we were, M. le President. Her lucid exposition elicited a polite compliment from M. le President, and we also are obliged to her. (To be continued.)

Money Saved Through Anty Drudge.

Mrs. Youngwife (at telephone)—"Hello Harry, you don't need to order those new tablecloths and napkins at Blashman's after all. Anty Drudge came in this morning and showed me how Fels-Naptha soap would take the stains out of the old ones. They're as clean and white as new now."

Anty Drudge—"You just keep on using Fels-Naptha, Deary, and it'll save you buying lots of things—everything you wash will wear so much longer. It'll save your health and beauty, too."

Stains are the great trial of a woman, who does the family wash in the old way. Coffee stains, fruit stains, egg stains, occasionally blood stains, and many others which defy all ordinary soaps and hard rubbing as well. In despair, the housewife boils the clothes until their fibre is softened and weakened, but even then the shadows of the stains remain.

Such stains are easy for Fels-Naptha soap. They are but minute particles of colored matter clinging to threads of the cloth. The Fels-Naptha dissolves them into tiny atoms which can't cling to anything. A rinsing separates them from the clothes entirely. The stain is gone, leaving the clothes clean, white and pure. And mind you, all this is done in cold or lukewarm water, without boiling or hard rubbing. Fels-Naptha does not in the slightest degree harm the fibre of the cloth as boiling does. No other soap, no matter what it is called, will take out stains without boiling. Be sure to get the genuine Fels-Naptha. It comes in the red and green wrapper.

MR. KNOX'S SUMMER.

About Middle of May Will Go to Valley Forge for Hot Term.

WILL SPEAK AT GETTYSBURG.

The invitation to repeat in New York City his address at Kalamazoo was a very high honor to a public man.

Special to The Courier.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 2.—Senator P. C. Knox of Pennsylvania was highly complimented by being invited to repeat at Kalamazoo, Mich., on February 11. The title of the speech was "The People, the Railroads and the National Authority," and was a comprehensive and able statement of the assumption of control over the railroads by the Federal government.

At the time this speech was first delivered it attracted wide attention and the Civic Forum of New York was so impressed with it that its members requested Senator Knox to come to New York and repeat the address, which he did. It is seldom that an address by a public man is thus honored. Usually a speech, even though it be an able discussion of a living topic, soon passes into history. In this case Mr. Knox embodied in an hour's talk so much valuable material of such an enlightening character that the prominent and intellectual men who compose the Civic Forum considered it worthy of repetition.

Senator Knox has been besieged with invitations to make addresses in all parts of the country, but with few exceptions he has been obliged to decline them. Mr. Knox has an old-fashioned notion to the effect that a Senator is under obligations to stay in Washington during the sessions of Congress and attend to the duties of his office and he does not consider himself free to absent himself frequently. The days that he has missed in the Capitol when the Senate was in session have been very few and his absence has been only due to important business that required his attention.

On Decoration Day Senator Knox has promised to make an oration at the Gettysburg battlefield, and arrangements are now in progress for this event. Two years ago the orator for Memorial Day on that historic ground was President Roosevelt and some of the greatest men of the nation have since honored it with invitations to speak there. The subject of Senator Knox's speech has not been announced, but it will be of a historical and patriotic character rather than an economic discussion.

Upon the adjournment of Congress, probably about the middle of May, Senator Knox will go to his farm at Valley Forge for the summer. He will preserve the same attitude towards the Presidential nomination that he has from the start, and will make no canvass in the attempt to get delegates. He will not attend the Chicago convention, but will remain at his country home all summer.

FOOT IN THE STIRRUP.

Dr. Menmore in a Perilous Predicament at Smithfield on Friday.

SMITHFIELD, May 2.—Dr. Walter T. Menmore was extricated from what might have been a dangerous position Friday morning. He rode up and dismounted from his horse in front of G. A. Feather's store, when one of his feet caught in a stirrup of the saddle and threw him onto his back, with the foot still caught in the stirrup.

Charles Greene, a boy in the Dr.'s employ, happened to be nearby and assisted him to his feet. The horse, which had been a quiet animal the doctor might have been seriously injured, or possibly killed.

Forfeited the Game.

The Moyer baseball team came over yesterday afternoon to do up the South Side Union, but left for home in the evening a disappointed bunch. Things went along fairly well until about the seventh inning, when the Moyers changed pitchers. Then the South Side boys started in on a general foot race and chased each other around the diamond so many times that the score keeper lost count; besides they had kicked the corner of the ball, which belonged to the Moyers. The latter were miffed and refused to play any more, thus forfeiting the game.

Visited the County Capital.

John Daniel Augustine, Misses Julia and Cynthia Ross, Miss Mary Mitchell and William Eddies of Addison, Pa., were Connelville visitors at Uniontown to see Cole Brothers' Show on Thursday. They rode up to a party who went to the County Capital to see the show, but the weather was so bad that they were forced to return home without witnessing it. While in Connelville this morning they called up on friends here.

BUTLER, Pa., May 1.—The non-union mines at Argonne, this county, have reopened under protection of a detachment of Troop D, State Constabulary, and a preliminary injunction restraining the officers, organizers and members of the Butler-Mercer sub-district, United Mine Workers of America, from interfering with workmen.

ELEVEN INNINGS AND NO TRIUMPH.

W. Va. League was at the game. The umpire seemed to be away off on strikes and balls, besides making several very bad decisions against the base runners.

There were two strikes on Montgomery. The pitcher threw a high one which Milt struck at. The catcher jumped for the ball, which hit his glove and rolled back and hit the grandstand, bounced back and was recovered by the catcher, who threw it to first ahead of Montgomery. Montgomery was safe, nevertheless, because had the ball not hit the grandstand, the catcher would not have recovered it in time to throw him out. Yet the umpire called him out. Bunt!

There were not many ladies at the game on account of the cold, but those who were there enjoyed it, and they certainly did root for our boys.

Ellam, whose regular position is shortstop, but who is playing first base on account of the non-arrival of Tiffany, played that position like an old-timer.

Uniontown a Winner.

UNIONTOWN, May 2.—Uniontown and Charleroi opened the season here yesterday afternoon in the Pennsylvania & West Virginia League in the presence of about 800 people. The weather was bitterly cold and this had the effect of keeping the attendance down. Abe Kruger and Bert Humphries, two old P. O. M. League pitchers, faced each other, and after the second inning the game developed into a pretty pitcher's battle, with honors about even until the eleventh. In this inning Rudolph for Uniontown ran into deep trouble, and for a long while dropped it. Daulty sacrificed and Nally's drive to middle gave Charleroi its third run. With two down in the eleventh Rudolph hit safe and went to second on McCloskey's out. Rudolph, who had apparently lost the game, drove a three-base hit into middle, scoring Roberts ahead of him and he came on in over the plate with the winning run on the throw to catch him at third. WRIGHT-METZLER COMPANY.

We Buy and Sell More Merchandise Than Any Two Competitive Stores.

Selling $37.50 Tailor-mades at $29.65 is Causing the Most Active Buying We've Ever Known.

We Would Have Been Greatly Disappointed
If this Sale Had Not Proved a Grand Success.

It's the first time we've ever held such a sweeping sale of women's apparel in the month of May, and we are justified only in the fact that our purchases were so heavy that the first of the month found us too heavily stocked. That our suits are distinctly removed from the ordinary is a conceded fact. We are big enough to demand these distinctive features and you have only to view those exquisite styles to realize how vastly superior are the suits that comprise this sale.

The suit pictured in the upper right hand corner of this page is one of the many positively new things that are features of this sale—a 32-inch fitted jacket—a strictly tailored garment, the "lines" of which determine it as exclusive.

If you have admired any suit among the many we show priced between $27.50 and $37.50, you can now effect a decided and decisive saving. These prices will remain in force only until stocks are reduced to normal size.

All $35.00 and $37.50 Suits Are Now $29.75

Not a single suit reserved, and the very reason that brought about this sale is sufficient guarantee that our purchases are complete. Every modish style is shown and counting the new arrivals you'll find nearly fifty suits at this price.

$29.75

All $27.50, $28.50 and $30.00
Suits Are Now $24.50

For women who have delayed buying a suit until now, this is most welcome news. Think of buying a Wright-Metzler $30.00 suit with all its distinctive style features at $24.50, and this during the first days of May; regularly priced at $27.50 and $30.00....

Crawford Oxfords Don't Slip at the Heel.

Their Snappy Style and Superb Wearing Qualities
Commend Them to Careful Dressers.

The hug-tite heel of the Crawford low cut solves the one negative question of Oxford shoes. They can't slip. They fit tightly about the ankle. The toes are warranted not to break down. There is two features that alone would popularize the Crawford to a wonderful extent. They are the snappiest, smartest styled shoes shown in the United States today and we congratulate ourselves that we are able to present them to Fayette County. We show every style including the popular Crawford Buckle Oxford at $4.00.
